

MAINE 2004

Mid October 2004 for little over a week, we traveled along the coast of Maine with Larry and Beth Bucklin. We took hundreds of pictures which made it into a narrated slide show.

We started in Portland, childhood home of Larry and Beth and temporary stop-over for the Queen Mary II. Portland Lights is a popular scene for many post cards.

Nothing beats Maine lobster. We wasted no time sampling this delicacy. With virtually everyone on the coast of Maine trapping lobster in small boats, they were every where and bought for pennies.

Our first trip was by ferry to Peaks Island where we rented bicycles and got a special treat of Maine culture. Then we head out along the coast to inhale the spectacular fall colors.

Camden is especially scenic viewed from its tiny little port and from the mountains behind.

Acadia National Park on Mt. Desert Island with its unique blend of natural beauty was our destination.

We climbed 1000 feet up Mt. Cadillac and looked down on the coast and Bar Harbor.

We looped around and head south through the White Mts and rain in New Hampshire and ended in Gloucester, Mass.
